EVENT REVIEW By TOYSINBOX PEOPLE

Toysinbox's Super Busy October

Although the Big E 2016 officially ended on Oct 2nd, Toysinbox's Big E activity was not over until a week after. We were busy with dismantling our booth and finishing unfinished busts orders from our 3D photo booth. Toysinbox people entered the October with an expected tight schedule as Toysinbox 2016 Holiday Season 3D Printing Show was coming up soon. Due to the extremely tight schedule, we could not squeeze enough time to continue teaching our popular 8-session class "Hello Tinkercad: 3D Modeling 3D Printing" in the Fall. The schools understood and invited us back for the Winter class. How wonderful!

Although we hosted the first Toysinbox Holiday Season Printing Show in 2015, we wanted to add a lot more content for the 2016 Show and bring more fantastic 3D printing fun to the public. First, we expanded the show rooms from one to four and added many hands-on interactive exhibits. Second, we united all the exhibits under the theme of STEAM. With lots of planning, designing, and printing, our show was getting into the shape by the end of October and we had two more weeks to put everything in place.

Toysinbox Holiday Season 3D Printing Show in Thanksgiving Weekend

The 3D Printing show was scheduled to open on Nov 19th for the Thanksgiving Weekend. As expected, we had lots to finish before that deadline. On the opening day, we had a very nice family that drove all way from North Reading to Wellesley, just for our show. What a great effort! They said that they had a good time here and they even tipped us. What a wonderful family!

During the Thanksgiving Weekend, we had families from different towns come to our show. They all have great passion for 3D printing.

If you could not come to our show, you can get a tiny glimpse of the show via the pictures below.
